Department of Labor and Regulation Connects Students to Internships

PIERRE, S.D. – The South Dakota Department of Labor and Regulation’s (DLR) online jobs database can help students search for internships at www.sdjobs.org.

“Internships play an important role in strengthening and growing South Dakota’s workforce,” said state Labor and Regulation Secretary Marcia Hultman. “Through meaningful work experiences, students get exposed to possible career opportunities.”

The internship website offers a one-stop shop for students to search for positions throughout the entire state using SDWORKS, the state’s largest jobs database.

Internships supply businesses and employers with opportunities to fill their temporary workforce needs, while offering real-world experience to students. This gives companies the ability to identify potential permanent, long-term employees.

“Internship opportunities give students valuable life experiences and help them become workforce ready after graduation,” said Secretary Hultman. “The hope is to expose students to the workforce, and encourage them to live and work in South Dakota.”

To apply to or post an internship on SDWORKS, visit www.sdjobs.org or talk to a workforce expert at a DLR local office.
