

Work Search Requirements

An active search for work each week and registration with your state's designated workforce agency is required. In-state claimants are automatically registered with the SDWORKS jobs database when a claim is filed.

Job search assistance is available at your local DLR job service office. You may be required to participate in certain programs to receive benefits. To find your nearest job service office, visit dlr.sd.gov and click on "Job Service Offices."

An active search for work each week includes:

- Two acceptable job contacts
- Acceptable and honest search methods
- Detailed records of your contacts so they can be verified. You will need to report:
 - Full name of business
 - Business Address (email or website if applicable)
 - Phone number - including area code
 - Date and method of contact
 - Name of person contacted (if applicable)
 - Position applied for

Examples of unacceptable search methods include contact by telephone, newspaper ads without an identified employer, internet contacts made through search engines (unless a specific employer and position is identified), or contacts made with close relatives or spouses.

It is your responsibility to know and understand the rules and regulations and to provide accurate information. Providing false statements and information, or withholding information, to obtain benefits for which you are not eligible is fraud. If you commit fraud you will be required to pay the reemployment assistance benefits back.

Checklist to Receive Benefits and Avoid Fraud:

- Apply as soon as you are unemployed.
- Actively search for work and be ready to accept employment offers.
- File a weekly request for payment for each week you are requesting benefits.
- Report your hours and earnings, including part-time or temporary employment if you are working while filing for benefits.
- Report all job separations.
- Respond to all requests for information.
- Stop filing weekly requests for payment once you begin full-time employment.
